All course work units are marked as Pass but you are given feedback to let you know which areas you are working at higher levels (Merit & Distinction)

There is one assessment point at the end of the course, but we will be looking at your blog work on a weekly basis to ensure you are keeping up with your work.

How will I submit work?

You will create a personal blog for each subject using WordPress.

Each week you will upload images and screen shots of your practical work to your blog in your Blog Workshop lesson and outside of lessons as part of your homework.

You must evaluate and write about your own work on your blog

You will be required to research artists (Secondary research) and record your own personal research (Primary research) on your blog pages too.

During assessment weeks the course leader will look through your blog and update personal checklists on Teams.

Final outcome

We did an observational drawing inspired by the artist Frida Kahlo. It is a drawing created by real life object which is exactly seen. I choose a picture of a vase with flowers, skulls, fruit and some historical legacy. The reason I choose this was I wanted to mix human legacy and object see in this artwork.

How will my work be assessed?

Each project is marked by the course leader and you will be given feedback and help on how to improve

You will have a target grade to work towards

You will be given formative assessment & summative feedback in 1:1 meetings

You will agree personal targets with your teachers through out project's and in 'personal target' weeks

Its important you submit work for set deadlines so you have the time to improve your work to meet higher grades

This is our student contract, which outlines the expectations of the college.
